A short history lesson of the castle of Coevorden

In its oldest form, the castle was a "motte", built in 1042 with a wooden tower, surrounded by canals and wooden walls. Here people could withdraw when in imminent danger.

The castle has a turbulent history. Because of its location in swamp areas on transit routes, in particular those between the Hanseatic cities of Münster and Groningen, and the lucrative tolls; the fortress was of great strategic importance and it has changed owner many times. Unfortunately, this has not always been without violence.

The castle was among others used for the battle of Ane (1227) and the Siege of Coevorden (1592). The castle was looted, destroyed and rebuilt several times. In 1402, Bishop Frederik van Blankenheim rebuilt the castle.
